ABSTRACT OF THE INVENTION

A method for uncounted overhead charging calculates an overhead criterion, which defines the maximum difference in size between an output overhead and an input overhead of a data packet. Once the overhead criterion is determined, a rate regulator is configured to charge according to the value of the overhead criterion. The number of bytes designated in the overhead criterion is taken into account when policing the data traffic.